

27nd session of the Human Rights Council

Item 2

Opening Statement of the new High Commissioner for Human Rights
General Debate 9 September 2014
Delivered by Renate Bloem

Thank you Mr. President,

High Commissioner Zaid, CIVICUS warmly welcomes you to the Council and congratulates you for assuming the daunting task to become the chief of Human Rights, the 6th UN High Commissioner. You do this at a time, when the world is on fire in too many corners.

We thank you for your first very rich update and concur with your frank analysis.

For CIVICUS, an organisation committed to protection of civil society rights and freedoms, we particularly thank you for your strong pledge and support for civil society. CSOs help in ensuring representation of all voices in the development and governance discourses, particularly those of the most vulnerable and marginalised. They must be enabled not impeded in performing these functions.

CIVICUS remains deeply concerned about the global democratic deficits. We are seeing an increasing crackdown on pro-democracy activists around the world - as currently in Bahrain - in the face of contemporary waves of protest, including through a combination of dubious legislation, the demonisation of protest movements and direct harassment of civil society activists and their organisations.

We also remain concerned about the rise of extremism and right wing movements which has led to attacks on women's rights and LGBTI activists, those who promote the cause of peace and tolerance from non-state actors.

We believe that the Office of the High Commissioner and the Human Rights Council have played a key role in the protection of human rights defenders including through relevant resolutions and entrenchment of the Universal Periodic Review process where civil society has been able to represent its challenges before the international community. Yet, we remain deeply concerned about the issue of reprisals against activists for cooperating with UN mechanisms. Navi Pillay said in one of her last statements: "Human Rights Defenders are the heroes of our time"; we now hope that you will take up the challenge and become the next unwavering advocate for defending the space for civil society and human rights defenders.

Thank you, Mr. President
